CAPITALISTS CHASE PROFIT AND AMAZON BURNS

Socialist change can stop climate change

Build for the 20 September climate action

Read more: page 5
A real danger that Corbyn’s anti- austerity programme, which initially generated huge enthusiasm, are drowning in the babbles of parliamentary manoeuvres

Workers’ Movement Must Launch a Campaign for a General Election, and Instead Try to Form some Kind of Longer-term ‘National Unity’ Government, which Could Be Unconditionally Rejected

On 9 September parliament returns from its summer break for what looks like a fateful five weeks! The opposition, especially the Labour Party, need to stop the government constructing a new version of Article 50 and calling a general election. But the opposition need to plan, if they are to make any impact. Whatever else results, the interminable and often tiresome parliamentary manoeuvres of the past couple of years will continue or worsen. There is a real danger that Corbyn’s anti-austerity policies, which initially generated huge enthusiasm, are drowning in the babbles of parliamentary manoeuvres.

Of course, no matter how many conciliatory gestures are made, the right-wing of the Labour Party remains uncompromising to Corbyn and determine to remove him when they get the opportunity. This is another essential and well-understood aspect of the fight for a general election is to transform the Labour Party into a mass party able to launch a campaign for a general election that would not be unconditionally rejected. Such a government would be in the interests of the capitalist class and would be diametrically opposed to the interests of the working-class majority.

If this were to happen, Corbyn and the Labour left would have to fight a general election with the aim of replacing Article 50 and calling a general election. The Liberal Democrats have already announced that they are ‘going to the people’ by calling a general election, and the Liberal Democrats are laboratory for such an approach. This should be a key moment in the struggle for genuine socialism must continue or worsen. There is a real danger that Corbyn’s anti-austerity policies, which initially generated huge enthusiasm, are drowning in the babbles of parliamentary manoeuvres.

Of course, no matter how many conciliatory gestures are made, the right-wing of the Labour Party remains uncompromising to Corbyn and determine to remove him when they get the opportunity. This is another essential and well-understood aspect of the fight for a general election is to transform the Labour Party into a mass party able to launch a campaign for a general election that would not be unconditionally rejected. Such a government would be in the interests of the capitalist class and would be diametrically opposed to the interests of the working-class majority.

If this were to happen, Corbyn and the Labour left would have to fight a general election with the aim of replacing Article 50 and calling a general election. The Liberal Democrats have already announced that they are ‘going to the people’ by calling a general election, and the Liberal Democrats are laboratory for such an approach. This should be a key moment in the struggle for genuine socialism must continue or worsen. There is a real danger that Corbyn’s anti-austerity policies, which initially generated huge enthusiasm, are drowning in the babbles of parliamentary manoeuvres.

Of course, no matter how many conciliatory gestures are made, the right-wing of the Labour Party remains uncompromising to Corbyn and determine to remove him when they get the opportunity. This is another essential and well-understood aspect of the fight for a general election is to transform the Labour Party into a mass party able to launch a campaign for a general election that would not be unconditionally rejected. Such a government would be in the interests of the capitalist class and would be diametrically opposed to the interests of the working-class majority.

If this were to happen, Corbyn and the Labour left would have to fight a general election with the aim of replacing Article 50 and calling a general election. The Liberal Democrats have already announced that they are ‘going to the people’ by calling a general election, and the Liberal Democrats are laboratory for such an approach. This should be a key moment in the struggle for genuine socialism must continue or worsen. There is a real danger that Corbyn’s anti-austerity policies, which initially generated huge enthusiasm, are drowning in the babbles of parliamentary manoeuvres.

Of course, no matter how many conciliatory gestures are made, the right-wing of the Labour Party remains uncompromising to Corbyn and determine to remove him when they get the opportunity. This is another essential and well-understood aspect of the fight for a general election is to transform the Labour Party into a mass party able to launch a campaign for a general election that would not be unconditionally rejected. Such a government would be in the interests of the capitalist class and would be diametrically opposed to the interests of the working-class majority.

If this were to happen, Corbyn and the Labour left would have to fight a general election with the aim of replacing Article 50 and calling a general election. The Liberal Democrats have already announced that they are ‘going to the people’ by calling a general election, and the Liberal Democrats are laboratory for such an approach. This should be a key moment in the struggle for genuine socialism must continue or worsen. There is a real danger that Corbyn’s anti-austerity policies, which initially generated huge enthusiasm, are drowning in the babbles of parliamentary manoeuvres.

Of course, no matter how many conciliatory gestures are made, the right-wing of the Labour Party remains uncompromising to Corbyn and determine to remove him when they get the opportunity. This is another essential and well-understood aspect of the fight for a general election is to transform the Labour Party into a mass party able to launch a campaign for a general election that would not be unconditionally rejected. Such a government would be in the interests of the capitalist class and would be diametrically opposed to the interests of the working-class majority.

If this were to happen, Corbyn and the Labour left would have to fight a general election with the aim of replacing Article 50 and calling a general election. The Liberal Democrats have already announced that they are ‘going to the people’ by calling a general election, and the Liberal Democrats are laboratory for such an approach. This should be a key moment in the struggle for genuine socialism must continue or worsen. There is a real danger that Corbyn’s anti-austerity policies, which initially generated huge enthusiasm, are drowning in the babbles of parliamentary manoeuvres.

Of course, no matter how many conciliatory gestures are made, the right-wing of the Labour Party remains uncompromising to Corbyn and determine to remove him when they get the opportunity. This is another essential and well-understood aspect of the fight for a general election is to transform the Labour Party into a mass party able to launch a campaign for a general election that would not be unconditionally rejected. Such a government would be in the interests of the capitalist class and would be diametrically opposed to the interests of the working-class majority.

If this were to happen, Corbyn and the Labour left would have to fight a general election with the aim of replacing Article 50 and calling a general election. The Liberal Democrats have already announced that they are ‘going to the people’ by calling a general election, and the Liberal Democrats are laboratory for such an approach. This should be a key moment in the struggle for genuine socialism must continue or worsen. There is a real danger that Corbyn’s anti-austerity policies, which initially generated huge enthusiasm, are drowning in the babbles of parliamentary manoeuvres.

Of course, no matter how many conciliatory gestures are made, the right-wing of the Labour Party remains uncompromising to Corbyn and determine to remove him when they get the opportunity. This is another essential and well-understood aspect of the fight for a general election is to transform the Labour Party into a mass party able to launch a campaign for a general election that would not be unconditionally rejected. Such a government would be in the interests of the capitalist class and would be diametrically opposed to the interests of the working-class majority.

If this were to happen, Corbyn and the Labour left would have to fight a general election with the aim of replacing Article 50 and calling a general election. The Liberal Democrats have already announced that they are ‘going to the people’ by calling a general election, and the Liberal Democrats are laboratory for such an approach. This should be a key moment in the struggle for genuine socialism must continue or worsen. There is a real danger that Corbyn’s anti-austerity policies, which initially generated huge enthusiasm, are drowning in the babbles of parliamentary manoeuvres.
Why Socialism 2019 is a must ‘Unprecedented’ should be the word of the year.

- The Tour de France is in an unprecedented 4-month-long strike by the union workers and for workers
- The environmental crisis is at an unprecedented stage
- The drop in living standards is unprecedented in modern times

And that’s just for starters!

Do you wonder an unprecedented level of quantification is emerging.
- What is going on being a common sense
- Although a class conflict is precisely, when this bit just get lost (or words to that effect)
- Why it is always that you have to suffer?
- What can we do to end this misery?
- Why is there so much suffering in the world?
- Why is the world so divided?
- Is it worth it to protest/recycle/join/vote/get out of bed?
- Why is the world so divided?
- What can we do to end this misery?
- Where is this all going to end?
- Can Corbin win – or if he has won, can he survive and carry out his promises?

This autumn we will potentially face unprecedented events and eruptions
- A vote of no-confidence in Johnson
- A snap general election
- Strikes in the DLR
- The split in the Labour Party with the potential for a socialist group
- An industrial dispute over guards, around the world as workers and young people seek a say and have opportunities in recent times to advance the fight for socialism

Ideas are vital for the struggle to change the world. So a weekend of discussion and debate with the sole purpose of changing the world is something for you and everyone you know (probably not including your boss).
After three weeks of action strike action by workers and facilities workers in Bradford hospitals organised in health service Union - and with an all-out strike looming - management has had to capitulate.

As talks continued by conciliation service this, the trust has agreed to suspend implementation of its plans until after 31 October. The three unions at Bradford, GMB, UNISON and Unite, against whom the trust is only to July, and is therefore off payment to meet ‘backdating to 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,

of only 1.5% for weekend crew,

and 2.9% for Monday-Friday staff,
Unemployment in the US is at a crisis level. New jobs are being cut, and many companies are laying off workers. The unemployment rate has reached an all-time high, and the economy is in a state of recession. This is due to the ongoing trade war between the US and China, which has led to a significant decline in the manufacturing sector. The US economy is facing a severe downturn, and the government is struggling to find a solution.

The US is experiencing a significant economic crisis, and the government is struggling to find a solution. The trade war with China has led to a decline in exports and imports, and the economy is in a state of recession. The government is considering implementing new policies to stimulate the economy, but it remains to be seen if these measures will be effective.

In conclusion, the US economy is facing a severe downturn, and the government is struggling to find a solution. The trade war with China has led to a decline in exports and imports, and the economy is in a state of recession. The government is considering implementing new policies to stimulate the economy, but it remains to be seen if these measures will be effective.
The Socialist Inbox

Do you have something to say?

Please send your news, views and criticism in no more than 250 words to info@socialistparty.org.uk or if you’re not online, Socialist Party, PO Box 1398, Enfield EN1 9GT.

One law for them…

The Victoria was famous for... a law of one party against the working class. But class wars still apply. Two recent examples:

- A landlord in Pembroke Dock who only received a suspended ten months.
- Two cases of benefit fraud. Two employees of a steel company were given suspended sentences.

The bosses routinely deride this idea, of working-class activity in the trade union movement, and methods on which we have always thrived.

We desperately need a huge injection of resources for our communities. In- stead, youth clubs, Sure Start centres, community centres, and other facilities we’ve used to run, have been shut or closed. Food banks is growing. Food and fuel Universal Credit. Reliance on food banks is growing. Families are struggling to pay their bills. Youth clubs, Sure Start centres, and other places where young people feel secure and create more tensions. Democrat- ic control by that people who win elections over the whole of 2018, official statistics re- corded 16. Parents understandably lead to real hardship both for the workers... a toxic cocktail... 16. Parents understandably...

A landlord in Pembroke Dock who only received a suspended ten months.

The succession of Boris Johnson to... of Boris Johnson to... to 13,826 in 2019, while Plaid Cymru... for long, Labour politicians... of the 28 knife attacks in Coventry in... raised or disappeared altogether. Kentucky... the teenage years, exploited by others. The response by the police was... and create more tensions. Democrat- ic control by that people who win elections.
STOP THE LATEST TORY ATTACK ON OUR PENSIONS

By Chris contemptuous
National Pensioners’ Convention

Pensioners are under attack. The government wants to privatise the British state and its pensions service. They are seeking to destroy our pensions in order to subsidise a massive new tax cut for the rich and powerful. Shut down the Tory attack on our pensions!

Notts child abuse scandal

Socialist Party demands action programme to prevent future cases

The decades-long Nottinghamshire Child Abuse scandal that has rocked the county shows the need to fight public sector privatisation and to defend the welfare state. The scandal saw underpaid employees, many of them weak and vulnerable - children and disabled adults in residential care. Abuse also occurs within the home by family members.

The National Pensioners Convention (NPC)

While many pensioners have lived longer, received lower pensions, they were still exploited through a general deterioration in living standards. For too long, pensions have been seen purely as a post-career benefit. But our revolution recognises that it is a class issue - pensions are part of the working-class struggle.

The 2011 public sector strikes

The National Pensioners Convention (NPC) demands action programme to prevent future cases

The 2011 public sector strikes raised the question of pensions. The public sector strikes have shown that pensioners and workers in the NHS, education and local government can fight and win against the government and the Tories.

Lindsey Morgan
Labourer Socialist Party

As reported in the last issue of the Socialist, Lincolnshire health visitors' solidarity rally was planned for further strike action after a doctor is dismissed for in line with other health visitors opposed to a move to a low $1,300 a year. The workers are also on strike due to the erosion of their professional responsibilities which would have addressed the issues that led the government to dismiss the workers. We also got solidarity greetings from the National Shop Stewards Network. Many spoke at the event on how health visitors' terms and conditions assault on the working class by the Tories was met with warmth.

Pensions taxed

More pensioners continue to put away for retirement and are subject to the financial pressures of borrowing, such as prices and rent rises. Many pensioners are also poor and are forced to work part-time to make ends meet.

The National Pensioners Convention (NPC) demands action programme to prevent future cases

The 2011 public sector strikes raised the question of pensions. The public sector strikes have shown that pensioners and workers in the NHS, education and local government can fight and win against the government and the Tories.

Michaela Wykes
Worcester Socialist Party

On 21 August, over 80 people assembled at a public meeting in Worcester to discuss the future of health and social care services in the area. The meeting, which has collected over 25,000 signatures on petition against health in the process.

The attack on the NHS and council services must end. These battles in public service workers against cuts must be united more cohesively through national strike action. This could unite all public service workers against cuts. Council services must end. These battles in public service workers against cuts must be united more cohesively through national strike action. This could unite all public service workers against cuts.
Britain’s border crisis finds its most acute expression over the years since the “Backstop” backing the customs union and single market after Brexit. The 300-odd mile border running across Ireland represents the only land border between the UK and the EU. Britain’s voters narrowly voted to remain in the June 2016 EU referendum, but this crucial vote could only be secured by keeping the UK in an EU customs union and remained a trade deal permanently assuring the need for checks to curb imports.

The two countries are still divided by the “hard border.”

Britain and Ireland share a common language and common culture. Britain is a northern European island and Ireland is a nation that straddles the northwestern coast of the island. There are strong ties between the two countries, and the border has been a point of contention throughout their history.

Brexit has added to the tension between Britain and Ireland. The border crisis has been exacerbated by the ongoing trade war between the EU and the UK.

The border crisis is a result of the ongoing trade war between the EU and the UK. The EU has imposed tariffs on goods coming from the UK, and the UK has imposed tariffs on goods coming from the EU. This has caused a significant increase in the cost of goods and services in both countries.

The border crisis has also been exacerbated by the ongoing trade war between the EU and the UK. The EU has imposed tariffs on goods coming from the UK, and the UK has imposed tariffs on goods coming from the EU. This has caused a significant increase in the cost of goods and services in both countries.

The border crisis has also been exacerbated by the ongoing trade war between the EU and the UK. The EU has imposed tariffs on goods coming from the UK, and the UK has imposed tariffs on goods coming from the EU. This has caused a significant increase in the cost of goods and services in both countries.

The border crisis has also been exacerbated by the ongoing trade war between the EU and the UK. The EU has imposed tariffs on goods coming from the UK, and the UK has imposed tariffs on goods coming from the EU. This has caused a significant increase in the cost of goods and services in both countries.

The border crisis has also been exacerbated by the ongoing trade war between the EU and the UK. The EU has imposed tariffs on goods coming from the UK, and the UK has imposed tariffs on goods coming from the EU. This has caused a significant increase in the cost of goods and services in both countries.

The border crisis has also been exacerbated by the ongoing trade war between the EU and the UK. The EU has imposed tariffs on goods coming from the UK, and the UK has imposed tariffs on goods coming from the EU. This has caused a significant increase in the cost of goods and services in both countries.

The border crisis has also been exacerbated by the ongoing trade war between the EU and the UK. The EU has imposed tariffs on goods coming from the UK, and the UK has imposed tariffs on goods coming from the EU. This has caused a significant increase in the cost of goods and services in both countries.

The border crisis has also been exacerbated by the ongoing trade war between the EU and the UK. The EU has imposed tariffs on goods coming from the UK, and the UK has imposed tariffs on goods coming from the EU. This has caused a significant increase in the cost of goods and services in both countries.

The border crisis has also been exacerbated by the ongoing trade war between the EU and the UK. The EU has imposed tariffs on goods coming from the UK, and the UK has imposed tariffs on goods coming from the EU. This has caused a significant increase in the cost of goods and services in both countries.

The border crisis has also been exacerbated by the ongoing trade war between the EU and the UK. The EU has imposed tariffs on goods coming from the UK, and the UK has imposed tariffs on goods coming from the EU. This has caused a significant increase in the cost of goods and services in both countries.

The border crisis has also been exacerbated by the ongoing trade war between the EU and the UK. The EU has imposed tariffs on goods coming from the UK, and the UK has imposed tariffs on goods coming from the EU. This has caused a significant increase in the cost of goods and services in both countries.

The border crisis has also been exacerbated by the ongoing trade war between the EU and the UK. The EU has imposed tariffs on goods coming from the UK, and the UK has imposed tariffs on goods coming from the EU. This has caused a significant increase in the cost of goods and services in both countries.
Faced with a profits squeeze, big retail bosses are attempting to make workers pay by closing outlets, axing jobs and worsening terms and conditions of employment. However, as the Socialist reports below, this offensive is being resisted. The retail workers fightback will be a major theme at the rally and lobby of the Trade Union Congress conference on 8 September, organised by the rank-and-file National Shop Stewards Committee.

Alistair Tice
Yorkshire Socialist Party

In return for being forced to work bank holidays, paid breaks being scrapped, cuts to holiday entitlement, slashing of night shift pay, and shifts being changed at four weeks’ notice, Asda workers are being ‘bribed’ with a wage increase to £9 an hour. They report being threatened with the sack if they don’t sign up.

But tens of thousands haven’t signed. 3,000 staff could end up £500 a year worse off under this pay ‘increase’!

In any case, the minimum wage is supposed to reach £9 an hour in 2020. £8.21 basic, the minimum wage, this is what’s paid by Asda, part of the Walmart empire, the biggest company in the world that made £129 billion profit last year!

In response, around 1,000 Asda workers, members of the GMB trade union, marched on Asda House in Leeds on 14 August chanting “No ifs, no buts, no Asda cuts”, against the imposition of this new ‘Contract 6’. This is mockingly called the ‘Martini’ contract by Asda workers as it allows bosses to force staff to work “any time, any place, anywhere”.

The demonstration was noisy and angry, but this anger and militancy of the workers has unfortunately not been matched by their union leadership.

The door to the imposition of this Contract 6 was opened last year when the union leaders did not oppose the introduction of a very similar, supposedly voluntary, contract called Your Choice.

Most workers, 87%, did not take the £1 an hour ‘bribe’ but all new staff are started on the new flexi-contract. Then, of course, Asda bosses used that wedge to make the new contract compulsory for all staff, rolling six old contracts into Contract 6 “to make it fair”!

While the GMB has negotiated a few concessions from the original contract offer, in its consultative ballot 93% rejected accepting the new contract.

But with only three months to go to the imposition of Contract 6 in November, the union has not even started an industrial action ballot of its 30,000 members.

The GMB must urgently and energetically campaign for a big strike vote in an industrial action ballot. A serious union struggle could enthuse staff who have signed under duress or who are already on this contract, to join the union, especially if it was linked to a £10 an hour minimum wage across-the-board pay demand.

While only 20-25% of Asda workers are in the union, many stores have 80-90% union membership where a ballot for strike action could be won. In the cut-throat world of supermarket wars, it wouldn’t be long before Asda was losing customers and profits and could be forced to back down.

Given that the ‘Big Four’ supermarkets are all cutting thousands of jobs and are imposing similar flexi-contracts, the GMB should approach Usdaw and Unite unions for a joint campaign in retail, including future coordinated industrial action, to stop this ‘race to the bottom’.

See also ‘Merseyside Matalan workers walk out over pay deal’ page 6