

No one can beat the Socialist on analysis and ideas. No one can even come close to the clarity and audacity of the programme we propose. All we need to do is get it out there. We need to sell it.

Who else has put forward a clear strategy to defend Jeremy Corbyn's anti-austerity stand and take on the Blairites?

What other paper is seen on countless strikers' picket lines, students' occupations and renters' marches to save their homes? And not just reporting, but offering practical assistance.

Where else can you sit in with the political white-water rides in Ireland, the US and the rest of the world? And what other paper has sister parties on the ground, taking part in the fight and giving you the real story?

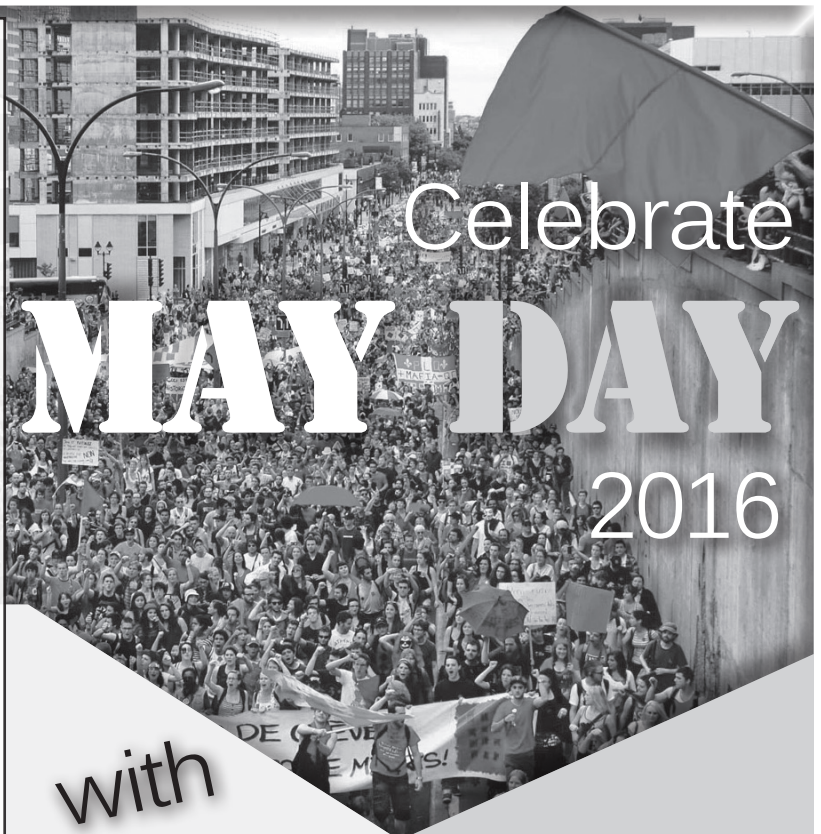

No one else does. Only the Socialist. And that's why anyone serious about fighting the bosses' system of cuts and crisis needs us.

We print stories by the real experts - ordinary members and workers directly involved in these battles.

But we can only keep on being the best if we have money. We're not a 'freesheet', paid for by capitalist advertisers. We depend on workers buying our paper to keep it up - and the annual boost we get from trade unions, campaign groups and party branches paying for May Day greetings.

Previous years' May Day appeals have resulted in fantastic displays of the respect and authority the workers' movement has for the Socialist. Let's make sure we do at least as well in 2016, and keep our paper number one.

No one can beat the Socialist on what we have to say. So let's make sure no one can ignore it either.
