

Barking flats burn two years after Grenfell Private firms put profit first

Pete Mason Chair of Barking Reach Residents' Association and East London Socialist Party member

n Sunday 9 June - almost two years to the day after the Grenfell Tower disaster - a fire ripped through a block of flats on the Barking Riverside estate. Fortunately all residents managed to escape. But this blaze should never have happened. Grenfell was a stark warning that the profit drive in housing risks lives. How many more lives have to be destroyed before there is real action against housing criminals?

Industry journal Inside Housing reports the wooden material which spread the fire had an insufficient "Class D" fire resistance, and that property management knew this two weeks after Grenfell in 2017 (see p8-9). Bellway Homes, which built the blocks, claims this is false - because, by government regulations, no fire resistance was needed at all! When we in the Berking Berking

When we in the Barking Reach Residents' Association asked Bellway to come to the estate just one month ago, after BBC Watchdog exposed failings in its construction, the company refused.

When Bellway finally arrived after the fire, representatives announced they would survey the estate and remove dangerous material 'if necessary'! What more proof do they need than this fire? Remove the cladding now!

Since Grenfell, the residents' association has raised questions about the wooden material used in the balconies and cladding. We were verbally told the materials used in homes would not ignite for 30 minutes in a fire. Yet the building was consumed by flames by the time the fire brigade arrived, around five minutes after being alerted. An angry and emotional meeting of residents from the 80 flats affected was held by the council the next morning, Monday 10 June. Residents' feelings on the immediate issues were loud and clear: take the cladding down now!

In the view of residents, the private landlord - Adriatic Land - collects its lucrative ground rent without taking sufficient responsibility for maintaining the property, leading to this terrible fire.

The owners awarded property management to Residential Management Group last October. This was to prevent self-management by residents, which the residents' association was and is fighting for.

Residential Management Group

initiated a review of fire safety which clearly was not up to scratch, because it introduced a night-time fire warden. But it would appear from the fire that its measures merely scratched the surface. The blame for this lies ultimately with the landlord.

Barking and Dagenham Council should also have been acting in the interests of residents, not landlords and investors. It could have demanded the testing and removal from our homes of dangerous material.

Council leader Darren Rodwell claims he was held back by government restrictions and private ownership. This only underlines that Labour councils' policy of privatisation is the wrong path. > Continued on p10 Socialist 13-19 June 2019

The paper of the Socialist Party. Issue 1046. ISSN 1366-9621. The Socialist, PO Box 24697, London E11 1YD Registered as a newspaper at the Post Office. Published by Socialist Publications, printed by Reach Printing Services

Nationalise to prevent closure

Ross Saunders Socialist Party Wales

The announcement that Ford Bridgend is to close is the latest in a series of blows to manufacturing workers. We are in the midst of a new wave of deindustrialisation that is weakening the UK economy.

Jeremy Corbyn should pledge that a Labour government would act decisively to prevent this, carrying out nationalisation of all industries threatening redundancies under democratic working-class control and management, with compensation paid only on the basis of proven need

The Bridgend announcement comes on the heels of Honda confirming it will close its Swindon plant, with the loss of 3500 jobs, Nissan announcing it will not build its new XTrail model in Sunderland and Jaguar Land Rover and Vauxhall preparing to axe thousands of

The bankruptcy of British Steel shows that the crisis isn't confined to the automotive industry and isn't a recent development in response to Brexit. Even before this announce ment. Wales, a former manufacturing heartland, had already lost 13.000 manufacturing jobs - 8% of the total - in the last ten years, ac cording to the GMB.

Demand

Ford itself used to have 27 factories in the UK but now has just five, only three of which are manufacturing plants. The company blames the Bridgend closure on a lack of demand for the engines produced by the plant but in reality Bridgend Ford had been set up to fail.

It's true that the contract for Jaguar Land Rover engines is due to end as JLR takes its engine production back in house in 2021. But there is considerable demand - for 500,000 annually according to Unite for the Dragon 1.5l Ford engine which goes into the Fiesta and Focus models, the most popular in Britain and in many other parts of the world.

The reality is that Ford is using fluctuations in demand to try and divest itself of factories in countries with a higher wage bill - that's what's behind the company's talk of Bridgend's 'cost disadvantage' and lack of 'efficiency'. Jobs at Dagenham will face a similar threat.

Thanks to Ford's 2008 'One Ford' restructuring programme, Dragon engines are also manufactured in Brazil, China, Russia and Mexico, where wages are much lower than in Europe. Unite has quite rightly demanded a fair share of the work distributed across these sites. It is not in the interests of the working class of any country to let big corporations continue the race to the bottom and pull out of countries where wages and conditions are higher. Ford typifies one of the fundamental contradictions in capitalism, which drives down wages in order to pump profits up, but then finds that workers collectively don't have the money to buy the products they have produced

"nationalise to save jobs" photo Steve Ger

Ford wants access to the lucrative UK automotive market - one of its biggest - but doesn't want to have to pay UK wages.

The global car industry is also facing other threats, including a drop in demand for diesel and the enormous investment necessary to transition to electric.

Brexit does have a potential impact on the industry, where supply chains criss-cross national borders, many times before finished products are assembled. However, it is being used as an excuse for layoffs and closures.

Ford is also shutting its Bordeaux plant in France, has announced 5,000 job cuts in Germany, and there are cutbacks in Russia and Brazil, too.

Cost cutting

Globally the company plans to save $11bn in a cost cutting exercise whose advertised purpose is preparing for investment into electric cars and other new technology.

GM is slashing 14,000 jobs, Volkwagen 7,000, and so on. Contrary to the industry's claims, much of these savings will be squandered as dividend payments and share buybacks, rather than invested in production that are on the horizon are part of the same phenomenon, as the big companies which dominate huddle together in order to share costs and

The huge handouts these private companies take from the state haven't solved its problems either.

Ford took a $6bn loan from the US government to develop the Dragon engine made at Bridgend, and over the 40 years it's been on the site has also taken £140 million in public cash from the UK and Welsh governments.

tionalise the industry. The Welsh government could make a start by it was threatened with closure by the previous owner.

Many workers will have questions how this could work. How, for example, can you nationalise factories that only make a component, not a finished article that workers want to buv?

But in reality most factory workers have been through a transition where a factory introduces a new line of product. Here the government would provide the necessary investment to fund the transition, including prioritising switching to environmentally friendly production and products.

Instead of setting up taskforces to direct workers to non-existent alternative jobs, democratically elected committees involving the workforce and consumers could identify what might be produced and what is needed.

An example like that could spread like wildfire and compel further action, across Britain and further afield. It was a Tory government that was compelled to nationalise Rolls-Boyce in the 1970s.

An appeal should be made to Corbyn to go further, to take similar steps in other threatened and ailing plants UK-wide which could be linked up in a publicly-owned car industry with the workers controlling and managing the business.

Why stop there?

But why stop there? One steelworker pointed out to us the lunacy of using Chinese steel that had been shipped halfway across the world - with all the damage done to the environment - to erect wind turbines on the hills above Port Talbot steel works, when the local plant was threatened with closure.

If the car industry and steel, as well as the energy industry and the railways, were nationalised under democratic workers control and management, great improvements and efficiencies could be identified.

Capitalism is a system in crisis offering workers a diet of job losses and closures. These are only small examples of what could be achieved by socialist policies.

If a Corbyn-led government was to nationalise the 120 major corporations and banks that dominate the economy - backed by the active mass support of the working class majority - it would be possible to harness the enormous wealth, science and technique that exists in Britain, not for the profits of a few, but to provide decent living stand-

In a world of poverty and job cuts, such an approach would creand provide services.

allowed to close.

Campaign

Rob Williams

sea Ford plant

production.

economy

Just like the railways, we are subsidising huge profit making companies but getting no control over decisions like job cuts and relocations in return. The only lasting solution is to na-

ards for all. nationalising Ford Bridgend, just as ate enormous enthusiasm from the The mega-mergers in the industry | they took over Cardiff Airport when | working class worldwide.

A Have you got news for us? DEADLINE: Friday before publication date - urgent news: Monday

🚺 020 8988 8777 🛛 😫 editors@socialistparty.org.uk 🔰 @socialistpaper

Editor: Sarah Sachs-Eldridge ales: Chris Newby

News: Ian Pattison igns: Dave Carr Workplace: Scott Jones inion: James Ivens

Photographer: Paul Mattsson Website: Judy Beisho

News

YEARS SERVI

RD/V STEO

TAKEAWAY LE MY PENSIL THE GREAT (Fraud) FORD UNICIONS(PPF) FORD BRIDGEND CLOSURE ANNOUNCEMENT MUST BE MET WITH UNITED DEFIANCE

1

FORD

STOLE

MY

PENSIO

Former Unite convenor at ex-Swan-

Rob Williams (2nd right) protesting with other Ford workers against pension cuts photo Socialist Party

fter months if not years of rumours and specuwhich have lation. shredded the nerves of workers and their families, Ford have finally announced the closure of the Bridgend engine plant after nearly 40 years of

This is a catastrophe for these 1,700 workers, their families and communities and the whole Welsh

The message that must be immediately sent by the unions and the Labour Party in Cardiff and Westminster to Ford and the Tory government is that the plant will not be

This would be the platform to build a mass campaign from the workforce on the Bridgend shop floor and workers in the related companies that depend on the engine plant that make the components

If a determined programme of industrial action is spelt out, it can give workers confidence to fight and build the pressure on the company and the politicians.

The Labour-run Welsh government should tell Ford that the plant will be nationalised to save jobs and communities and Jeremy Corbyn must give the commitment that a Labour government led by him will take it into public ownership. This would put huge pressure on the weak and divided Tory government to intervene.

Nationalisation

In 1971, a previous Tory government nationalised Rolls-Royce, and months later was forced to intervene when workers at the Upper Clyde Shipbuilders conducted a working occupation and 80,000 marched in solidarity Honda workers in Swindon and steelworkers in Scunthorpe are facing the same scenario and support the call for nationalisation to save jobs. Public ownership as the foundation of a socialist plan of production offers the possibility to re-tool the plant for alternative production. without loss of pay and pensions.

The Ford unions have already threatened a national strike ballot if Bridgend is closed. This must be prepared immediately.

A national demonstration to save Bridgend would be an important first step and could build workers' confidence. A national meeting of

NSSN 2019 conference

Saturday 6 July, 11am - 4.30pm

Conway Hall, 25 Red Lion Square. London WC1R 4RL

Pay on the day or you can end us a cheque: make out o 'National Shop Stewards etwork' and post to NSSN 0 Box 54498, London E10 DE. You can register in lvance by emailing fo@shopstewards.net

shopstewards.net

Ford shop stewards should meet with plant meetings throughout the called. company's sites. This is the best way to undermine any Ford divide-andrule tactics.

The best way to protect the other sites is to fight to keep Bridgend open. The lesson of the last 20 years is that every plant closure makes others easier and more likely.

In 2000, there were over 50,000 Ford UK workers but now only a fifth of that remains in work. In Bridgend right now there will be workers from closed plants such as Treforest, Swansea and Southampton. There is nowhere else to go.

A national strike would send a clear message of defiance, as would an immediate stoppage at the plant. It is surely not accidental that Ford sent workers home on the day of the announcement so that they couldn't discuss together or they may have been concerned about a walkout.

Occupation

Ford should be told that the plant will stop if there is any attempt to move out machinery and equipment. Even the idea of a plant occupation should be considered.

Two years ago, Unite won an industrial action ballot when it emerged that the company's sourcing plans threatened the plants' future. However, no action was

This was a serious mistake as undoubtedly it would have given Ford the impression that there wouldn't be a fight. This is a lesson that must be learned now.

As usual, when Ford looks to close plants, it has designed a closure package that attempts to buy off resistance. But no matter how much is offered, it will never be as good as a job on terms and conditions that have been won by the militancy of generations of Ford workers, in Bridgend and nationally.

Pensior

While those 55 or over can get immediate access to a full pension and those 45 or over will qualify when they reach 55, younger workers who face the dole will have to wait until they are 65.

But as ex-Swansea plant workers know, your pension is never safe. They were spun-off to Visteon in 2000 but their pensions went into the Pension Protection Fund which pays out reduced pensions, when the new company went into admin istration in 2009.

Only a five-year struggle by Visteon pensioners from the closed plants in Swansea, Belfast, Basildon and Enfield forced tens of millions of pounds in compensation

News

Nigeria: Stop police harassment of Abbey and Azeez!

Persecuted for the 'crime' of organising workers in a union

Socialist Party members protest outside the Nigerian embassy in London photo lan Pattisor

lan Pattison Socialist Party national commitee

Abiodun Bamigboye (Abbey Trot-sky) - a member of the Socialist Party's sister organisation in Nigeria, the Democratic Socialist Movement (DSM) - has been arrested by Nigerian police again and again and again.

He has now been arrested by the political police DSS.

In 2018, Abbey and DSM helped striking Sumal food workers win a 30% pay rise, a reduction in hours and the working week, overtime pay, more lenient sick leave, and the reinstatement of sacked employees.

The Sumal workers' victory inspired a wave of protests for better pay and conditions among other Sumal workers and at other factories in Ibadan city in Oyo state.

Abbey was the candidate for the Socialist Party of Nigeria (SPN), set up by DSM, for Oyo governor in this ear's general election.

The police meted out similar harassment to sacked Sumal worker, Azeez Arowosegbe. Scandalously, the National Union of Food, Beverage and Tobacco Employees back the management.

When Abbey and others met with Sumal management at the police station, Abbey, Azeez and members of DSM/SPN were not even allowed to sit! Only their lawyer was.

Sumal have accused Abbey of 'inciting' the workers against management. But it's the workers who invited Abbey to help, after the terrible role played by the union leaders. It's clear why Abbey and Azeez have been arrested. Management want to cut off the head of the movement, and wear activists down, so the workers are forced to agree to a rotten compromise Sumal management even tried to bribe Abbey, which he rejected. The same can't be said for others!

DSM said: "Several cartons of biscuits were offloaded by policemen from the vehicles that had brought the Sumal Food reps" to the police station meeting. "One can only imagine how much must have exchanged hands."

The Socialist Party organised a protest outside the Nigerian embassy in London on 6 June. Officials initially refused to take our letter demanding an end to the harassment of Abbey and Azeez - denying that we even had the right to protest - but relented after pressure.

Please send messages of protest to Sumal Foods contact@sumalfoods.com and the Nigeria police oyostatepolicecommand@yahoo. com. And copies and messages of support to DSM dsmcentre@yahoo. com. Contact Nigerian embassies and high commissions to protest too

See 'Sumal Food Company Ibadan: Production activities crippled and management brought to its knee by protest and strike of casual workers' at socialistnigeria.org

Sudan: Military crackdown to break revolution

Mass protests against the regime

continue in Sudan photo Lana Hago/CC

Dave Carr Fast London Socialist Party

A violent counterrevolutionary offensive is underway in Sudan. Health officials say hundreds of civilians have been killed and wounded by the Rapid Support Forces - the militia operated by the ruling military clique.

Opposition leaders have called for 'mass civil disobedience' in response. However, unless a strike movement is linked to a determined strategy to seize power, the armed might of the state forces will prevail. General Abdel Fattah al-Burhan. the head of Sudan's junta, visited Egypt and the United Arab Emirates for talks last month. Negotiations between Sudan's ruling Transitional Military Council (TMC) and the opposition Sudanese Professional Association have broken down.

Egyptian president Abdel Fattah al-Sisi earlier intervened after the mass movement in Sudan overthrew the 30-year despotic rule of President Omar al-Bashir to extend the TMC's rule from an African Union-negotiated two weeks to three

Counterrevolution

The Socialist Party previously warned of a looming counterrevolution. Sudan's "deputy leader - Mohammad Hamdan aka Himeidti - is the commander of the Rapid Support Forces... the unit is regarded by nany as a re-branded version of the anjaweed militias" - which Himeidti was part of - "which carried out massacres in Darfur in 2003.

"He has 7,000 troops stationed in Yemen on the Saudi Arabian payroll. It also includes the ruthless and ambitious chief of the intelligence services. Salah Abdallah Gosh, who controls powerful forces in the capital, and has close links to intelligence services, including the US CIA, and has recently been particularly associated with the United Arab Emirates."

The rulers of the regional powers of Egypt, UAE and Saudi Arabia have a vested interest in crushing revolutions which threaten their rule and will assist Sudan's military elite to remain in power

Donald Trump and US imperialism is content to allow these regional powers to call the shots in Sudan, while the UK government is, as usual, tail-ending the US administration. The working class and poor of Sudan cannot rely on outside 'mediators' or western powers to assist their cause. It is necessary for the mass movement to rapidly build democratic councils of action throughout the country to create an alternative power base.

But for this to succeed a clear revolutionary programme and strategy is needed

While Sudanese workers and youth have shown their determination to struggle, they need an inde pendent revolutionary party that is unflinching in its aim of taking power.

A revolutionary party must also embrace a socialist programme of nationalising major industry and the banks to provide jobs, public services, and end poverty, to consolidate working class support.

On that basis it would be possible to split the sympathetic rank-andfile soldiers away from their reactionary officer corps to the side of revolution, undermining the capitalist state.

Socialist Party members went to the demonstration in support of the Sudan protests in London to call for this and show our backing to the Sudanese revolution

See 'Revolution and counter-revolution in Sudan' at socialistparty.org.uk

Tory drug hypocrisy

Michael Gove's Tory leadership campaign was tripping to catch up after he admitted taking cocaine on several occasions while working as journalist

But as Tory education secretary Gove introduced rules that banned teachers for life if they did the same. Unbelievably, Gove has defended the policy!

Gove and other Tory contenders are unfit to govern because they've presided over a decade of cuts. privatisation and declining living standards. The Tories don't deserve to come within a sniff of power.

Gove put a line between him and millions of workers when he fasttracked school privatisation. His Tory rivals promise a heady cocktai of cuts for workers laced with tax cuts for the rich.

We need a general election now to kick them all out!

Lindsey Morgan Leicester West Socialist Party

> wo leshian women were subjected to a horrifying, violent, homophobic assault on a London night bus on 30 May.

A group of men, who saw them kissing, asked them to kiss for their gratification. When the women refused, they were punched and robbed.

The incident, and the image of the two women bloodied from the violent attack, drew widespread condemnation from working-class people who overwhelmingly reject homophobia.

The current system of capitalism causes inequality and encourages division

Right-wing populists have exploited workers' anger against austerity to encourage reactionary ide as such as homophobia. The Detroit Pride march was violently disrupted by neo-Nazis.

In the Socialist Party, we argue there is no place in society for homophobic hatred and violence.

In Britain, two women actors were also attacked on their way to perform in an LGBT+ play called Rotterdam. A group of people threw stones at them and heckled them after they kissed.

LGBT+ people often live in fear of being subjected to harassment on the basis of their gender or sexuality, which often forces people to be nervous displaying either affection for their partner or other aspects of their sexuality in public.

In response to the assault, the actors' union Equity released a statement on Twitter: "There is no place for homophobia in society, Equity stands in solidarity with the cast and crew of @RotterdamPlay and we will do everything we can to assist members who experience this kind of hate crime."

The offer of solidarity and support is welcome.

It demonstrates acknowledge ment that sexual harassment is a union and workplace issue, even when incidents occur outside the workplace. More can be done to eradicate homophobia.

The pioneering work of the Campaign Against Domestic Violence in the 1990s shows the potential power of the trade unions. This campaign, led by the Socialist Party, demonstrated that violence is a workplace issue, not separate to struggles for liberation.

We ask that the Trade Union Congress organise the unions to fight for the funding of services the working class needs. The trade union move ment should be calling for mass demonstrations to force the pathetic Tories from power.

The capitalist class exacerbates divisions along the lines of identity in order to prevent us unifying to gether to fight them. Inequality, and therefore homophobia, racism, and sexism, are built into the capitalist system

We fight homophobia now. And we say unite and fight alongside the entire working class for a system that allows for our full liberation through the socialist transformation of society.

arty.org.uk/join 020 8988 8777

list_party 🐧 text 07761 818 206 🛛 🐺 / CWISocialistPar

Terrible child murders linked to cuts

Jean Thorpe Child protection social worker (personal capacity)

The terrible murders of two young children in Northamptonshire have been published in reports called 'serious case reviews'. Dylan Tiffin-Brown, aged two, was murdered by his father in December 2017 and Evelyn-Rose Muggleton was murdered in April 2018 by her mother's partner.

Both reports comment on the impact cuts made by Northamptonshire's Tory council have on children's services. The reports refer to high staff turnover, management sick leave and inadequate IT systems.

Although the serious case reviews made clear that it was unlikely anything could have been done to prevent the "single catastrophic incidents" that led to the murders, there is no doubt that council cuts have contributed to and been a huge cause of the dire staffing and workloads for social workers.

An Ofsted inspection last October found social workers were "overwhelmed and drowning."

Over 260 children needing social work intervention did not have an allocated social worker. Some staff had caseloads of up to 50 children.

25% of qualified social worker posts were filled by agency staff, and therefore temporary, and a further 18% were not filled at all!

Bankrupt

In August 2018, Northants council became the first to go technically bankrupt for many years. It passed a further £70-million cuts budget.

The council already outsourced huge parts of its services and will now privatise children's services to an 'independent' organisation.

Ray Jones, a social work academ ic and former director of Wiltshire children' services, made a damning comment on the privatisation plans:

"Instead of the focus being on building a stable secure workforce... there will be the distraction of creating a new Trust... the two new Northamptonshire councils will be accountable for a service where their only influence will be through contract management of an independent company outside the transparency of public services."

The Socialist Party completely opposes the privatisation of North amptonshire's children's services. We call for full funding for all the county's vital public services and a reversal of previous cuts.

If the government doesn't do this, the councillors should. If they refuse, they should stand aside for anti-cuts councillors who will

Workplace

Socialist Partv members make big impact at trades council conference

lain Dalton Leeds TUC delegate

Socialist Party members made a big impact as delegates at the TUC's trade union councils' congress 8-9 June in Bournemouth.

Among the various motions passed, Socialist Party member Tanis Belsham-Wray moved one in support of the still unresolved Arriva Rail North guards' dispute, making the call for the company to be stripped of its contract and the service brought back into public ownership.

A motion was carried unanimous ly, based on the model by the Women's Lives Matter campaign calling for councils to defend domestic violence services, including by setting no cuts budgets.

Kevin Parslow seconded a number of motions from London which had originated from Waltham Forest Trade Union Council dealing with the fire service after the Grenfell Tower disaster and opposing gentrifying regeneration schemes.

Socialist Party members also tried to bring emergency motions in solidarity with the student climate change strike. Though neither was debated on congress floor, this did force the conference to issue a statement of full solidarity with student strikes and opposition to any reprisals from schools.

On another climate change motion Tanis was able to point to the way trade union councils in Yorkshire had provided active support to the students, including being invited to address rallies in Leeds, York and Hull as well as providing a meeting place for school students to organise in York.

General election

Socialist Party member Katrine Williams moved an emergency motion making the demand to actively campaign for a general election on a positive programme of workers' rights and socialist demands for jobs, pay and services and nationalisation.

The motion also called on the TUC to encourage trade union councils to hold meetings and rallies to discuss a trade union and socialist response to the Brexit Party and a workers' programme for Brexit.

Despite TUC opposition this was decisively carried by conference, with a handful of votes against.

Throughout the conference Socialist Party members made the case for trade unions to take a lead on these issues.

We fully supported the call for trade union councils to be actively involved in the Stop and Scrap Universal Credit campaign. We argued that trade unions can give an outlet for the anger of workers by providing a collective way to tackle the problems facing our class

Dave Beale Lancashire Socialist Party

1 June marked the sixth strike day by Preston and Chorley's Stagecoach bus workers. Demanding an extra 50p to receive £11 an hour, Unite the Union members have organised the strongest and most enthusiastic picket lines seen in central Lancashire for a long time.

Stagecoach is paying better wages to its bus workers in other parts of the north west, cynically maintaining the pay differentials of the old companies it bought up. Bosses refused to budge in negotiations last December, so Unite responded with a strike ballot - securing an astonishing 98% vote for a strike, with a 83% turnout!

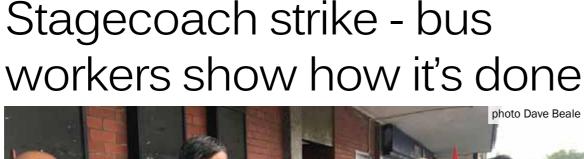

Unite recruited almost all of the non-union members in recent months. Pickets are often 100 plus, out of 250-300 branch members.

One of the pickets immediately sold seven copies of the Socialist for us, such is the fighting spirit.

Provocatively, Stagecoach is bringing in managers from other areas as scabs, stuffing money into their pockets and accommodating them with expenses in a local 4-star hotel

These scab drivers are breaching safety standards, for example by picking up passengers at unsafe locations and not stopping safely at bus stops.

However, the strikers are very committed and determined, knowing they are being cheated with £1.20 an hour less than other Stage coach drivers in the north west.

Meanwhile the company makes fat profits in Preston and Chorley. The longer term union objective is to achieve pay parity for all Stagecoach drivers in the region.

However, such disputes are a symptom of Thatcher's bus deregulation and privatisation, which the Blair and Brown Labour governments refused to reverse.

What is needed now is a clear com mitment by Jeremy Corbyn not only to re-regulate bus services across the country but also to bring them into democratic public ownership.

This is the only viable long-term basis to guarantee decent pay and conditions in the industry, to provide a radically improved bus service for both urban and rural areas. and to establish an integrated transport system in conjunction with rail

Further strike days will be on 18, 22, 25, 29 June, and 13, 16 July. Send messages of support to: gary.campion@stagecoachbus.com Donations to: Peter Winstanley Stagecoach Preston, Preston Bus Station, Preston, Lancashire PR1 1YU. Write cheques to: 'Unite Branch 6/91'. Please notify david. beale03@gmail.com of whatever vou send

Sellafield nuclear workers'strike

Low-paid Mitie workers at the Sellafield nuclear site in Cumbria went on strike on 7 June for a substantial wage rise and to have their union. Unite, recognised. The workers bought copies of the Socialist newspaper which included reports of their previous picket lines and strike meetings.

They are currently taking part in a two-week strike against what Mitie worker Debbie Matthews and Unite organiser Michelle Smith revealed as the dirty, dangerous and bullving reality behind the glossy, hi-tech image of the biggest industrial site in the country

"We work in the same environment as the skilled workers but without the training and protection. I've had to clear out cupboards containing used protective masks and I worked in a building full of asbestos. Even some of the Sellafield direct workers haven't had hot water to shower or wash their hands after the toilet.' Science hasn't brought civilisation to Sellafield!

Southampton hospital workers win

Security staff at Southamptor General Hospital, who have been attacked in the A&E department, have voted to accept a new offer covering pay, sick pay and new protective equipment.

Unite the Unite lead officer for ealth in the south east Scott Kemp said: "Unite is pleased to announce that our security staff at Southampton General Hospital have accepted a package that includes ncreased pay rates, improved sick pay arrangements, and new personal protection equipment.

"We regard this as an important ictory which demonstrates the strong solidarity shown by our members during this long-running dispute and also, more widely, the support they received from the local community.

Scott will be speaking at the National Shon Stewards Network conference on 6 July. See backpage for details

Shop Stewards Network bulletin Available every weel at shopstewards.net and by email subscriptio

Socialist Party Scotland

on 7 June. There have been well-attended ideological capitalists"

Workplace

SCOTTISH AIRPORT STRIKES AGAINST ATTACK BY "IDEOLOGICAL CAPITALISTS" - FIGHT FOR BETTER PAY AND PENSIONS

undreds of Unite trade union members at Glasgow and Aberdeen airports are striking to defend pensions and for better pay. So far there have been two days of strike action with more planned. Socialist Party Scotland gives our full solidarity and support. The strike has had a large scale impact with long queues at airport security and flights affected and grounded when the action started pickets with management trying to keep trade unionists as far away as possible from main airport buildings and supportive passengers.

Mechanics, firefighters, security admin, car park attendants are all fighting together. One picket told Socialist Party Scotland that airport owners make massive profits and have "engineered the disputes to try and break the union as they are

Unite's planned programme of strike action and an overtime ban up until October is a response to massive attacks by airport bosses AGS: a paltry 1.8% pay offer, really representing a pay cut, is combined with the closure of the final salary pension scheme

Unite should continue to coordinate the action and also look at involving AGS workers at Southampton airport. An important fight will be to try and prevent the use of sub-contractors and agency staff to break the strike by appealing to workers to not cross pickets

Wall of silence

A Unite spokesperson said: "Multiple times this week, Unite has requested to meet with managent to seek to remedy the dispute This has been met with a wall of silence. We cannot stand by while the boardroom of AGS enjoys pre-tax profits of £91 million, and let them close our pension scheme.

"We continue to call for further negotiations to end the dispute, but we have been ignored and will be continuing with our action until we are heard.

This dispute shows again the rising anger of workers over pay and attacks on terms and conditions. In the public sector, council workers in Dundee, Angus and West Dunbartonshire are also balloting to strike. Oil workers on the North Sea platforms have recently taken strike action.

We have seen the victory of the Glasgow equal pay strikers after a 48-hour strike. Scottish teachers also won big concessions on pay after a mass demonstration and th threat of a national strike.

This shows workers' action gets results and that if trade union leaders call action workers respond. The national and Scottish Trade Union Congress leaderships should take note and call co-ordinated action for pay rises to meet the cost of living, stop attacks on pensions and jobs and end austerity.

This dispute in the airports, a key expanding part of the economy, has the potential to have a major impact.

Socialist Party Scotland supports the demand of Len McCluskey and Unite for a general election to drive out the Tories and for a Corbyn gov ernment, AGS clearly want a race to the bottom in wages and conditions in order to boost profits for the company, as is typical with big business capitalists.

We need to fight for socialist solu tions where the major 150 companies, banks and key infrastructure such as aviation is brought under public ownership and democratically controlled and managed by the working class as a whole

Socialists in Unison hold positions in elections despite ban on campaigning

Glenn Kelly

Socialist Party industrial organiser

28 socialists who are supporters of broad left group Unison Action have been re-elected to the national executive committee of public sector union Unison maintaining its position on the 67-strong committee.

Six Socialist Party members were re-elected out of the seven seats we held. The right-wing hold on the union executive remains tenuous with just 31 of their slate elected.

Frightened, and in a desperate bid to hold on to power, the union leadership took the unprecedented step this year to not only ban members of political parties campaigning in their party name. They also said that even an organisation made up of "exclusively Unison members' was to be defined as an "outside or ganisation" and banned from campaigning under the threat of disciplinary action

Disgracefully, as we go to print, it is possible that four Unison Action supporters - three of them Socialist Party members - may face the threat of a witch hunt for simply calling for a vote for themselves and others on Facebook!

The Socialist Party is used to dealing with witch hunts and the union should know that we will fight any attempt to victimise or remove

The Unison Action steering committee voted to defend the right to campaign enshrined in the union rule book and agreed to defy the ban on campaigning as it was in breach of the rules.

However this decision was undermined by some of the national steering committee and even Unison Action officers who ignored this decision and in the end no material was produced.

Not surprisingly this attack on democracy has seen a further fall in the turnout in the election with just 4.5% of the membership voting.

As with some other unions many members have, and see, no day-to day connection with the national leadership and the need to change it. After all, the current Unison lead ership has presided over nearly a million lost jobs since 2010 and a massive fall in living standards.

For many the union is most rel evant when it's seen to fight to defend members at a local level where we have seen major victories in the likes of Glasgow, Birmingham and Mid Yorkshire, where a fighting so cialist lead has been given

South Western Railway guards to strike again

Nick Chaffey

Socialist Party Southern secretary

Talks between the RMT transport union and South Western Railway (SWR) at conciliation services Acas have failed to achieve an acceptable agreement. RMT guards have voted to recommence strike action - this time for five days beginning on 18 Iune

While SWR agreed to the presence of a guard, it has refused to agree the duties that guards will perform - a guard in name only For RMT this fails to address the key issues of safety and access for passengers.

What happens when an accident occurs? Will SWR guards be trained in their safety critical role and have control to open doors and take passengers to safety, if the driver has been disabled? What happens to passengers who need help with assisted access on the network? Who will SWR provide to ensure there is trained staff to assist?

SWR has pushed RMT guards into 35 days of strike action over the last two years by its intransigent refusal to reach an agreement. Failing to ensure safety, SWR has also failed in their franchise delivery to provide increased timetable capacity and new rolling stock resulting in losses of over £100 million.

With rising ticket prices on overcrowded trains, support for rail renationalisation continues to grow.

As car congestion and concerns over air pollution and associated health problems grows, the case for rail renationalisation also grows A fully funded, integrated public transport system providing safe accessible and affordable travel must be a key part of the campaign for an immediate general election to bring an end to the failed decades of privatised rail.

Feature 🛨

Paul Kershaw Chair Unite union housing workers' branch > years ago, on 14 June 2017, 72 people perished n the Grenfell Tower fire in est London The capitalist press expressed outrage when Shadow Chancellor John McDonnell rightly described it as "social murder." But the loss of life was caused by profit seeking, cuts, and an institutional contempt for working-class residents; it was not some unpredictable natural catastrophe.

For the bereaved and local people, the grief and shock continue. It has become increasingly clear that the factors that led to Grenfell are far from unique. Similar risks exist nationwide as shown once more by the fire at Barking Riverside on 9 June (see front page).

Amid tears of self-pity, Theresa May used her resignation speech to claim credit for a 'caring' response to the disaster. Her comments were dramatically at odds with the mood of those affected.

She claimed her office was a "platform to give a voice to the voiceless to fight the burning injustices that still scar our society." She added that "it is why I set up the independent inquiry into the tragedy at Grenfell Tower, to search for the truth so nothing like it can ever happen again, and so the people who lost their lives that night are never forgotten."

The residents' group Grenfell United responded that it is harder to think of a greater injustice than Grenfell. They pointed out that - two years after the fire - the government has failed to deliver housing reform, failed to make people safe in their homes, and made the last two years a battle for the bereaved and survivors.

The fire exposed again the class chasm in society, and the callous incompetence of the capitalist state at a local and national level. It also tested the workers' movement. We should seriously consider the strengths and weaknesses revealed.

Them and us

In the immediate aftermath of the fire, the local council was almost absent from the relief effort, reflecting the impact of years of cuts.

There was an enormous outpouring of solidarity as community groups sprang into action and volunteers from all over London trav elled to north Kensington to help and bring donations. Trade unions also organised collections.

Theresa May visited, but avoided meeting local people, provoking outrage by just seeing officials. In contrast. Jeremy Corbyn met volunteers and local people.

A typical comment picked up in the mainstream media was that "Corbyn came here and walked around as if he is one of us. That's how it is. That's why he has been so successful. Because he

The Socialist's front page on the disaster

Marching for

iustice two days

after the fire

pic James Ivens

is one of us" (Independent, 16 June 2017).

Wellsprings of support for Jeremy Corbyn and the anti-austerity policies he was associated with were revealed May promised that people displaced - who, as she said, often had nothing - would be rehoused within three weeks.

In fact, progress has been agonisingly slow, stretching over years - despite the local area being one of the richest in Europe with more than enough empty homes to house families. Official fig ures showed at least 1,652 homes as completely empty in the Royal Borough of Kensington and Chelsea.

But even these figures play down the scale of hous ing being used as an invest ment - as safe deposit boxes for the rich - because they exclude homes occupied for part of the year. Housing charity Shelter estimated i August 2017 that over 10% of nomes across the borough were kept empty most of the

When Jeremy Corbyn raised the idea of requisitioning empty homes to help displaced residents, he got an enormous response

Socialist Party members campaigning in the area in the days after the fire were left with no doubt that the mood was intensely political.

Local people queued up to take our leaflets, and welcomed what we said supporting Corbyn and calling for real action. Comments to the effect that 'they' can find the money for wars, but not for 'us' were common in the discussions that followed.

Fighting for safety

The Socialist Party put out campaign materials straight away to assist any group of residents who wanted to organise for safe housing in the aftermath of Grenfell.

This could have been the start of a massive, sustained campaign. The capitalist press responded in horror to the suggestion of requisitioning because it challenged sacred property rights. They sensed the danger in popular anger being linked to radical demands. Labour should have pressed on with demands that empty homes must be used for the homeless - and have added that council cuts, which laid the basis for heightened fire risk, should be reversed immediately so vital safety work could begin as rapidly as possible.

Blocks around the coun try face similar dangers to Grenfell. It was entirely possible that a Grenfell-like fire could have occurred in a Labour-controlled authority. The Barking fire has demonstrated that point.

Across the UK, the flammable cladding that played a major role in the Grenfell Tower fire was found on nearly 500 buildings, around 170 of them private residential blocks. I has since emerged that other types of cladding are also unsafe.

Even now, few of the blocks with

TWO YEARS ON

STILL FIGHTING FOR SAFETY AND JUSTICE

Survivors stormed the council offices demanding action photo James Ivens

Grenfell Tower on 14 June 2017 photo @NatalieOxford (Twitter)

Grenfell-style cladding have been the weakest Tory government ever, fully made safe. Recommendations to install sprinklers in high-rises - dating back at least to the inquiry into the 2009 Lakanal House fire in south London, and repeated since Grenfell - have been widely ignored by landlords and politicians.

A stand-off between government and private owners, each expecting the other to pay up, has left tenants and leaseholders stuck in the middle, with neither government nor freeholders wanting to foot the bill, waiting for the other to blink first. Unsurprisingly, there are reports the consequent anxiety is having a terrible impact on the mental health of residents.

Imagine how things could have developed if Labour had committed to reimburse councils that carried out vital life-saving work, not waiting for a general election.

Industry journal Inside Housing reports that Labour has now called for the remaining 150 blocks to demonstrate "substantial progress" towards removing the cladding by December or face confiscation. They have had two years - confiscate them now, get the cladding off!

The Institute for Fiscal Studies cal culates that local government spending on housing has been slashed by half over the last eight years. If Labour councils had started safety work on the back of a mass campaign and billed the government, they would have won enormous support.

In the context of perhaps such a campaign would have been an irresistible force

Of course, if the leadership had set a fighting, anti-austerity course, based on the potential power of the organised working class, it would still in the end have faced ferocious opposition not just from the landlords. bosses and Tories, but also from the Labour right

The pro-capitalist wing of Labour remains dominant in the party's power structures, including local government. In order to properly respond to Grenfell, the Labour leadership would have to be prepared for a fight with the Blairites.

Residents around the country often did not know how safe their homes were. Local authorities are subject to Freedom of Information law, so have to provide that information when demanded. Housing associations, which now manage most social housing, are considered private bodies and not covered by that law.

Many associations initially refused to share fire risk assessments with residents, despite the recommenda tion of the state's official 'information commissioner' that they should proactively make them available. Most (not all) now do when demanded, but not proactively Grenfell resi dents had raised fire concerns over years, but had been ignored or even threatened with legal action by their landlord. Many 'social landlords appear to continue to make the same mistakes as the Grenfell landlord, the misnamed 'Kensington and Chelsea Tenant Management Organisation'.

Feature

Residents' control

When the Tory-Lib Dem coalition government came to power in 2010. the social housing regulator which even then had a limited role was restricted further.

Now it narrowly focuses on finance - protecting the private investors that housing associations rely on, not their residents. This was part of the coalition's notorious 'bonfire of the quangos'.

Reforms would be welcome - but we cannot rely on state regulators. Social landlords must be made truly accountable through public ownership and democratic control by residents and housing workers.

Instead of operating like commercial property companies focused on 'investors' they should be fully funded by social housing grant, as in the past, and be open and accountable to residents and communities. If tenants vote to change their landlord, they should be able to move to council control.

A sense of being ignored and abandoned is prevalent among tenants. Jeremy Corbyn and the trade unions should respond by acting as their voice.

But this will mean being prepared for a decisive break with the pro-capi talist wing of Labour.

A socialist programme for safe homes after Grenfell

For an independent, working-class inquiry

The workers' movement should initiate a major investigation into Grenfell Tower and the implications for housing around the country, in addition to the official inquiry. It should be led by trade unions and residents' groups, drawing on independent expertise.

That investigation must be genuinely independent of government and profit interests so it's free to draw out the implications of spending cuts and privatisation, as well as make recommendations that do not compromise safety because of austerity. It should examine why recommendations following earlier fires were not implemented.

The official inquiry is slow and too narrow. Even the initial report on events on the night of the tragedy has now been postponed to October. Who knows when the final report will emerge? All this has a knock-on effect on the possibility of criminal prosecution. Jail the killer housing criminals

Clean up the toxic waste!

Investigate and clear up toxic waste from the fire! Scientists testing the area have warned that repeated assurances there was no risk are wrong. Although their work was government-funded, we only know because the scientists leaked their information. An independent inquiry should also look at why false assurances were and pledge a Labour government to given.

No safety, no rent!

If residents are not satisfied that their homes are safe, the full backing of the workers' movement must be given to withholding rent and service charges. No safety, no rent adding off now bill the government

Money must not be a reason for further delay. The government should have funded immediate removal of dangerous cladding two years ago - it must do so now. The Tories have belatedly pledged £200 million, but this is inadequate.

Claw the money back from irresponsible private landlords. If they refuse, or residents demand it, take them into public ownership. Property management must come under the democratic control of residents.

Fight the cuts!

Labour councils must refuse to pass on any further cuts. Stop all privatisation of housing, repairs and renovation! London mayor Sadia Khan must reverse all cuts to the London Fire Brigade and other Labour authorities must do the same.

Jeremy Corbyn and John McDonnell must call for this immediately.

reimburse any council which uses reserves and borrowing powers to make homes safe and reverse council cuts

Build council homes

Jeremy Corbyn was correct to say that there is no solution to the housing crisis that does not start with a mass programme of council house building. He has stated that council house building needs to return to the level of the late 1970s.

That requires a return to grant funding instead of attempting to get crumbs from the private developers' table. The land and big construction companies should be nationalised under democratic working-class con trol to facilitate this.

Capital controls would stop international speculators driving up housing costs while leaving homes empty Nationalising the banks and financial system would guarantee that resources can be mobilised to meet housing need. as part of a democratic, socialist plan for the economy.

But local councils can begin today. They have powers to requisition those empty homes now, and must use them. Using the same reserves and borrowing powers that can reverse the cuts, they should start building council homes straight away

Feature 🛨

Continued from front

t the 10 June meeting, still-shaken residents had many questions for Residential Management Group, Amid shouts of "jail them" and "shame on you" there was an overwhelming feeling that had this fire happened at night the outcome could have been much more tragic.

The flames rapidly spread up six floors through the entirely wooden balconies, which acted similarly to the cladding in the Grenfell disaster. Residents banged on neighbours' doors to alert them.

Cladding off - safety now

Residents raised questions about the fire alarm, which they report was too faint to really hear and didn't start until the fire had engulfed one side of the building.

There were also suspicions that the ventilation system didn't work. Corridors filled with smoke, making it harder for residents to evacuate. All these and other questions must be answered.

Between the landowners, builders, managing agents and housing associations, residents are fed up with each "stakeholder" passing the buck on problems. It can't be allowed to happen this time.

Residents feel Bellway has never been a fast mover on criticisms or concerns. The neighbouring block, clad with the same material, is heated by a temporary outside unit, run on diesel, which sits near the building!

This is because the heating and hot water are inadequate and have been since construction - a battle the residents' association has fought for some time. Imagine the fierce heat of a burning building on the side of that unit full of diesel, like an unexploded bomb!

While residents wanted to get home as soon as possible, equally there was no faith their flats were safe to return to. This fear can only be eased by removing the wooden material.

And residents don't want to take Bellway's word the properties are safe. They deserve to see fire safety information now. We have demand ed it, and have been promised it immediately.

But the whole validity of Bellway's safety assurances is in question. An independent fire safety check must take place as soon as the cladding is removed.

For quality, permanent rehousing

For the time being, residents are staving in hotels. But some already know they will never be able to return to their homes. They must be rehoused in like-for-like properties.

There are many new builds going up on the estate. After relevant safety checks and removal of any cladding. displaced residents should be offered homes in these.

If decent homes can't be found for displaced residents, the council should requisition empty homes to ensure residents can stay in the local area.

FIRE TEARS THROUGH BARKING FLATS - CLADDING OFF NOW!

Quality, permanent rehousing now!

Residents on the estate include owner-occupiers with leaseholds, housing association social tenants, and private tenants. No resident, in particular those displaced, should have to pay service charges for fire damage, of course - in fact, they should instead be credited.

But if residents feel it is necessary, they may decide to use their collective strength, as in other housing campaigns, by withholding rent and service charges to build pressure, under the slogan: "no safety, no rent, no service charge!" This undoubtedly will be a point of discussion.

Already, practical donations have been piling in. Many residents escaped with only the clothes on their backs. The community will have to guarantee democratic control of these generous donations by organised residents to ensure they continue to get to those who need them.

Since Grenfell, questions have arisen about how much of the millions raised for survivors actually made it to them. We must make sure this does not happen here.

Failure of private sector

If construction work and fire checks don't happen immediately, it will be more proof of the incompetence of the many private companies getting rich from these homes.

Adriatic has had two years since Grenfell to sort out the cladding. and has failed. The profit-driven private firms should forfeit their ownership and management.

After paying to make good all the properties, along with Bellway, quish the block to the residents for democratic self-management.

If implemented across the estate, this could open the way for fragmented services to be unified and run by the council, for example, which is at least an elected body, unlike the private firms.

Council leader Darren Rodwell may complain, but this tragedy is also down to the council's policies of privatisation - the entire estate is privately owned.

Rodwell and local Labour MP Margret Hodge have found time to attack Labour leader Jeremy Corbyn for his anti-austerity politics, but have not done enough to defend the right of residents to safe housing.

Almost exactly two years after Grenfell, those residents are still fighting for justice (see p8-9). Potentially deadly cladding remains Adriatic should be made to relin- on over 150 buildings across the country, and removal has been extremely slow.

We must build a fight for affordable, decent and safe housing for all. The residents' association is meeting to launch a campaign on fire safety on the estate this week. I will be arguing that we campaign for:

Quality, permanent rehousing of all affected residents

Remove all wooden balconies and cladding immediately Release and re-do the fire safety assessment Confiscate the blocks from Adriatic to ensure residents' safety, and place them in the hands of democratically elected

> Read the full version at socialistparty.org.uk

residents' organisations

The Socialist Inbox Do you have something to say?

Box 24697, London F11 1YD

Capitalism - a rigged system

"You cannot have capitalism without well known is London Capital and Finance (LCF).

ity - if there was any!

lead to compensation claims.

which appear to have no prospect of The twisted irony is that this time local repaying the money. The expectation is authority workers may be punished twice that only 20% of investors' money will - firstly by having their employment transferred to the failing privateers, and now £50 billion has been transferred from We aim to seek the same fate for the rule by these disgusting, greedy and be recovered. The whole structure of the capitalist by potentially taking massive hits to their the working class into the pockets of present government, to be replaced by a system is rigged to allow the fraudsters pension pots because reckless councils the Tories' already very rich friends. The Corbyn-led socialist government commitand financial crooks to get away. If you twice bet on the private sector to deliv neediest in society have suffered while ted to ending all austerity. Tony Mulhearn are on benefits and are overpaid the er instead of providing quality services the top 10% have seen their wealth grow state wants the money back, yesterday. year on year, as shown by the Sunday Merseyside Pensioners William Jarrett If you miss a job interview the state is ciation Media Office Times Rich List. They should pay, not the Δcc North Tyneside Socialist Party onto you straight away. If you commit a pensioners massive fraud you will get your day in This government has cynically turned Lords divide and rule Woodford is reportedly still making up to over responsibility to the BBC for their court. It is of course impossible that no one £100,000 a day charging trapped invesgeous scam of LCF. We cannot leave our financial future of all.

Pete McNally Worcester Socialist Party

requested.

Send your news, views and criticism in no more than 150 words to editors@socialistparty.org.uk - or if you're not online, Socialist Inbox, PO racism" as Malcolm X explained. Nor can you have capitalism without fraud. In the UK the Serious Fraud Office has 41 cases on its books. The most LCF used advertisements which purported to offer Individual Savings Accounts (ISAs) with a return of up to 8%. There is now an investigation into the collapse of LCF and the supervision of the firm by the Financial Conduct Author-

Thousands of first time investors put pension pots and savings into LCF unaissuing mini-bonds, is not a protected activity, though other activities may in hundreds of firms, the products were not ISAs and only invested in 12 firms. ten of which were "not independent" of LCF. The administrators have found "highly suspicious transactions". A quarter of all the money invested went straight to the marketing firm Surge.

The administrators of LCF have asked the four people mainly involved to return £236 million. No joy so far.

in the City of London knew of the outra-in the hands of these crooks. A socialist society would eliminate the chance of people losing their hard-earned savings in these dodgy investments and use the wealth we have created for the benefit ware that the core activity of the firm.

Promoted as low-risk ISAs investing

Money invested was loaned to firms

The Liverpool Mersevside Pensioners' Association condemns the decision by the BBC to charge over 75s the TV licence

During the last ten years in excess of

We reserve the right to shorten and edit letters. Don't forget to give your name, address and phone number. Confidentiality will be respected if Fund guru Neil Woodford announced at the beginning of the month that he was suspending his flagship portfolio of funds - ie banning withdrawals by investors.

With an estimated value of nearly £10.2 billion, the Woodford Equity Income Fund experienced serious turbulence trading as public sector outsourcing contractor Kier announced a profit warning which saw its shares lose 41% of their value.

Among the fund's investors 'redeeming' their investment - making a run on the fund - was Kent County Council. seeking its £250 million stake. KCC and other local authorities invest in funds like Woodford's as part of their local government pension scheme mixtures.

This means that the very local authorities which send public services out to tender have been gambling the success of their pension fund performances on the very privateers marauding jobs and services from councils!

Kier, like other entities among the Blairites' private-public partnership racket, appears to be running on borrowed time, and lots of public money, Labour and Conservative councils are equally responsible for feeding the private sector Leviathan, failing to bring services back in-house.

tors management fees - Editors.

TV licence fee - over 75s don't pay!

own funding knowing that that organisation would claw back any expenditure they could, even it meant attacking the most vulnerable to satisfy their political masters. Of course, the BBC's 'star' performers would still receive their megasalaries.

The generation that survived World War Two will be among those attacked.

We will call for all pensioners to refuse to pay this further imposition and join us in a campaign similar to the great Militant-inspired campaign against the Poll Tax when 18 million refused to pay. That successful campaign ultimately led to the removal of Margaret Thatcher as prime minister.

read with interest Terry Pearce's article regarding the House of Lords proposed changes to pensioners' benefits (Young and Old Unite and Fight - the Socialist, 9 May). The Socialist may be interested in what I wrote to the Yorkshire Evening Post on the subject, but wasn't published.

It is absolutely outrageous and disgusting that these greedy Peers with their £305 a day allowance are suggesting cutting benefits for pensioners including: Winter Payments, free TV licences for over 75s, free bus passes and ending the triple lock on pensions.

This is another attempt to divide and Leeds most of all unelected individuals. Blaming pensioners and making them pay for the austerity measures imposed by this government on the young is not accept

The British state pension is among the lowest in Europe with some pensioners taking less than £160 a week. I'm all for helping the younger generation but not at the expense of pensioners while at the same time we have tax cuts for millionaires and low corporation tax.

These Lords and Ladies are very good at cutting the benefits of the poorest in society but not so good at cutting their own pay and allowances (not to mention their subsidised bars and restaurants).

Hopefully the next Labour government under Mr Corbyn will set about cutting their Lordships' allowances with a view to scrapping the ignorant and arrogant House of Lords. Kevin Wilson

SOCIALIST 13-19 June 2019

Campaigns

D-Day for fighting Trump attack on NHS

Portsmouth Socialist Party

There was anger amongst trade unionists and young people to Trump's hypocritical visit to take part in D-Day commemorations in Portsmouth on Wednesday, with over 300 turning out to a lunchtime rally in the Guildhall Square. They were joined by a number of people who had come to attend the D-Day event but wanted to join the anti-Trump protest as well.

Trump, like Theresa May, represents the billionaires who have pursued austerity policies that have tary, Nick Chaffey, spoke at the rally attacked the lives of D-Day veterans by cutting pensions, benefits and the National Health Service.

Arguments against our protest for 'noliticising' D-Day were compromised by Trump's call to open up the NHS to US corporate privateers. A letter signed by leading local trade unionists in PCS, RMT and Unison was published by the Portsmouth News and over 100 protesters signed our letter, many buying copies of the Socialist and some filling in join cards.

Socialist Party regional secre-

Edmonton joins Enfield North Labour in supporting 'no cuts' fightback strategy

London Socialist Party reporters

Edmonton Constituency has become the second Enfield Labour Party to pass a resolution opposing all cuts, calling for 'no-cuts' budgets using reserves and for launching a nass campaign.

Enfield North Labour Party assed a resolution supporting a similar strategy some time ago - see report from the Socialist. Two of the three CLPs in Enfield now support this strategy.

The Socialist Party, which clearly welcomes this new move, has long advocated a strategy of setting nocuts budgets as part of developing a mass campaign against austerity We pledge to offer maximum support in building this important front in the fight to defend services and working-class communities.

The Edmonton resolution criticises the Enfield Labour administration for implementing yet more Tory cuts to vital services which will impact most severely on vulnerable members of the community. It points out that councillors do not have to accept Tory austerity and calls on them to set a legal no-cuts budget.

giving solidarity to all those who had joined the protest to oppose

Trump's racism, homophobia and sexism. He appealed to everyone to build a mass campaign calling for an immediate general election, to end austerity and fight for a Corbynled Labour government implementing socialist policies to meet the

A successful follow-up Socialist

Students meeting discussed these questions, with plans being made to step up our fight to kick out the needs of all.

Moreover, it details that a cambaign "involving the council workforce through their trade unions, the CLP memberships and the wider working class communities from across Enfield can be built through a series of large anti-cuts public meetings, rallies, and demonstrations, thus mobilising a huge groundswell of public support for the Labour councillors."

"An Enfield borough-wide conference should be convened, inviting all interested organisations (trade unions, anti-cuts groups, tenants' associations and community organisations, etc), to come and discuss and then agree on practical measures needed to support the councillors and resist austerity. "Above all this should be a national campaign. We are all facing the same enemy, the Tory government. Enfield council should therefore reach out to Labour councils throughout London and the rest of the country so that a national conference of Labour councillors who are willing to stand up to the Tories can be convened."

Save Essex libraries protest

Dave Murray Basildon Socialist Party

Over 600 people marched through Chelmsford on 8 June in protest at Tory-run Essex County Council's plan to shut 25 out of its 74 libraries.

The measure has sparked a wave of anger across the county which has seen protests of hundreds in some of Essex's small towns and villages - many of which have not seen mass protests since the peasants' revolt!

When the people of Galleywood or Manningtree take to the streets in their hundreds. it's a sign that austerity is alienating people even in what were once considered to be Tory heartlands.

Police attempts to restrict local demonstrations - by forcing large crowds to demonstrate on the pavement rather than in the road - have not gone unnoticed by participants. Demo organiser Andy Abbott (Save our Libraries Essex - SOLE), speaking from the steps of the county library, said that while the campaign was not party political it was anti-austerity. This reflects the fact that people are aware that elsewhere Labour councils have also made cuts.

The demo brought together library users as well as trade unionists from the NEU. Unite. Unison and other unions, as well as many Labour Party members.

Essex County Council's cabinet meets on 23 July to decide the matter. Protesters will gather outside County Hall in Chelmsford from 9am

You can join the campaign to oppose these closures here: https://www.facebook.com/ Chelmsford-SOLE-Save-Our-Librar ies-Essex-191027638500353/

The Socialist Party is being evicted from our national headquarters. We have had a presence in London since the early 1960s and have been at our current premises for over 17 years. We believe that it is essential that our HQ remains based in the capital city, therefore we have launched a building appeal for a new premises. We do not have any rich backers. Our branches are base in working class communities, among workers, students and young people who have been nammered by austerity, debt and low pay. But our members and supporters have been prepared

a 200 000 ZOMBIE TORY GOVERNMEN GENERAL ELECTION NOW

or call 020 8988 8777 including Socialism Toda

If you agree with what you read in the Socialist consider making a donation to the Socialist Party's fighting fund:

cheques payable to

13-19 June 2019 the Socialist

Campaigns/Review

TV Review: Chernobyl WORKERS' HEROISM Vs SCLEROTIC STALINISM

Ryan Aldred lymouth Socialist Party

his five-part docudrama focuses on the disaster in 1986 that took place at the Chernobyl (now part of Ukraine) nuclear facility in the Soviet Union.

The mini-series manages to encapsulate so much without overloading the viewer or rushing the content. Even the score is perfect with the haunting sound of a Geiger counter rising in volume and tempo as some of the more dramatic events are portrayed.

Chernobyl hits hard right from the off, beginning with a suicide; the significance of which only reveals itself at the end of the series after the show trial scene.

We're then thrust straight into the immediate aftermath of the explosion, followed by officials scrambling to maintain the Stalinist bureaucracy which remains a consistent theme throughout.

One of Chernobyl's greatest strengths as a docudrama is that it seamlessly intertwines an imagined dramatisation of the events while largely remaining true to the events that actually took place.

It gives a precise account of the real technical mistakes made by the engineers in the hours and then moments leading up to the disaster while also revealing the overarching political reasons for the maverick attitudes which led to the reactor exploding.

Even some of those most responsible can come across as effects of radiation exposure sympathetic characters as the mini-series does well to highlight how severely the state machinery bears down and tries to cover up its culpability for ignoring what was by that time a known safety flaw with Soviet RBMK reactors.

Under the rule of this bureaucratic caste the planned economy, which underpinned the Soviet Union, was devoid of any elements of democratic workers' control - the prerequisite for genuine socialism.

Contradictions

Chernobyl paints a very intricate and detailed picture which doesn't simply portray the Soviet state as some unquantifiable entity but exposes its contradictions. It struggles against workers, soldiers and scientists to maintain itself while relying on them to avert more serious dis asters from developing.

The heroism of the Russian coal miners, the three men that opened the sluice gates, the firefighters, the soldiers and the scientists that in many cases sacrificed their lives makes for powerful viewing.

Many of them did so not because the Gorbachev regime ordered them with the threat of a bullet reserved for dissenters but because they understood the gravity of the situation.

On the other hand some, like the firefighters, acted without being fully aware of what they were deal ing with.

To this day the official death toll for Chernobyl according to Soviet records is 31, despite scientific estimates of thousands dving from the

The mini-series shows the con stant clash between the scientists who were desperately attempting to fix the multitude of problems that arose in the immediate aftermath and the Stalinist state under Gorbachev. It saw the maintenance of its prestige both nationally and internationally as much more important than the truth.

The potential of a planned economy and the utterly stifling effects of the bureaucracy are laid bare.

This is made so glaringly clear when, for instance, 5,000 tonnes of boron and sand are so quickly sourced from across the Soviet Union to put out the reactor fire, as are thousands of workers and soldiers brought in to handle the situation.

However, Pripyat (population 49,360), only three miles away from the reactor site, takes days to evacuate and is only done when it is learned that school children in Frankfurt, hundreds of miles away are being kept indoors to shield them from the radioactive fallout.

Chernobyl is gritty, emotionally charged and yet incredibly informa tive all at the same time. It pulls no punches in portraving some of the dark tasks that many of the workers and particularly the soldiers had to face

Clearly deserving of the highest ever rating of 9.7 out of 10 on IMDb; Chernobyl is as harrowing as it is spectacular.

In short, it is a masterpiece rich with political insight while providing chilling entertainment. For that reason it is an absolute must watch.

We are looking for a building to buy or rent in London, where rents are high, and large enough properties to buy are over a million have the funds we need.

make a sacrifice to ensure that we pounds Your donation, however big or small, will make a difference. Be part of something bigger - donate to the Socialist Party building fund and know that you're part of fighting for a better world. You can make a donation at socialistparty.org.uk/donate and include 'building fund' in the comments.

t		Donate to the building fund today!
ł	socia inclu	You can make a donation at socialistparty.org.uk/donate and include 'building fund' in the comment
to	∎ cal	■ call 020 8988 8777
AI	D			PL EDG	E

£25,000 £50,000 £75,000 £100,000 £125,000 £150,000 £175,000 £200,000

Subscribe to the Socialist new e-sub only £2.50!

Get socialist, anti-cuts news, reports and analysis delivered from a range of free books to your door or inbox every week

cribe by direct debit to cho socialistparty.org.uk/subscribe

- e-sub only £2.50 a month, or paper direct debit just £4.50, or £6.50
- or make cheques payable to Socialist Publications, PO Box 24697, London E11 1YD
 3 months £20, 6 for £35, 12 for £60

Donate today!

- pay by card on 020 8988 8777 stparty.org.uk/donate
- Socialist Party', PO Box 24697, London E11 1YD

Socialist Party Fighting Fund

SOCIALIST 13-19 June 2019

International 🏈

Southern Ireland elections: Big gains for Greens, little change for right-wing parties but setbacks for Left

Niall Mulholland Committee for a Workers International (CWI)

> or media commentators and pundits the big story of the local and European Union elections in Southern Ireland was the surge in support for the Green Party. The party tripled its percentage vote to 5.6% in the local elections, jumping from 12 to 49 seats, and picked up two MEP seats.

At the same time, the Left parties fared disappointingly in the elections in Ireland. Solidarity and People Before Profit lost council seats and recorded lower votes in the EU elections than in previous outings. The small Workers Party and 'left independents' also lost council seats.

Why did the Greens surge when the Left did not? The Greens were the main beneficiaries of the growing concerns and awareness about climate change. For many voters. especially young people, the Greens were seen as the party most likely to get something done about the climate change crisis.

In part, the Green vote was also a protest vote against the establishment parties in Ireland, which only deliver more cuts, the desperate housing crisis and other ills of the capitalist system. The climate change emergency is leading many young people to reach radical conclusions about the capitalist system and its parties.

However, the Greens, with their more 'humane' capitalist politics, will disappoint many young people and workers. The party aims to win half a dozen or so seats at the next general election and already has its eye on going into government with Fine Gael or Fianna Fáil.

The last time the Green Party shared power with Fianna Fáil, 2007-2011, it went along with austerity policies. The coalition government was also marred by sleaze and corruption. Not surprisingly, the Greens were trounced in the 2011 general elections.

But many of the young people who voted for the Greens in 2019 will have no memory of this. They will have to go through the bitter experience of the reality of the Greens nolicies

Sinn Féin vote falls

Sinn Féin, which for years attracted support on the basis of an 'antiestablishment' appeal, lost 5.8% of the vote compared to the last local elections.

It finished at 9.5%, losing a third of its seats (in 2014 Sinn Féin won 159 council seats and is now down to 81

the party most likely to get something done about the climate change crisis photo Paul Mattsson seats). The party lost two of its three | the erosion of workers' rights in MEPs.

The party previously made gains from working-class voters when it posed as anti-austerity. But Sinn Féin has openly sought to form a coalition government with either of the two main right wing parties, Fine Gael and Fianna Fáil, and chased middle class votes.

On a local government level, Sinn Féin has failed to deliver over the last five years. The "progressive" Sinn Féin-Labour coalition running Dublin City Council did almost nothing to tackle the capital's serious public housing shortage.

The Labour Party, which is discredited in the eyes of many workers for going into coalition government with right-wing parties, saw its vote go down slightly on 2014 but finished up with 57 seats (six more than it won five years ago).

Labour leaders will desperately hope that as memory fades about its appalling role in austerity governments it can make some headway in the next general election. A split from Labour, the Social Democrats, fought its first council election campaign, gaining 19 councillors, across Dublin and other cities like Cork. Limerick and Galway. Clare Daly, a former Socialist Party councillor and TD, who became an 'Independents 4 Change' TD. was elected to the European parliament in the Dublin area.

She did not present a socialist alternative but campaigned against the EU, against EU militarisation. inequality and the far right. Daly also successfully campaigned on her record as an anti-establishment figure, on abortion rights, as well as her high profile taking up the case of Garda (Irish police) whistle-blowers

Left vote

There was a steep fall in the vote for the explicitly Left parties, Solidarity and People Before Profit, however. Combined, Solidarity-PBP lost 17 local council seats, leaving eleven councillors. PBP lost seven seats and now have seven.

Solidarity, in which the Socialist Party (CWI Ireland) plays a major role, went down from eleven to four seats standing as Anti-Austerity Alliance (AAA) - in 2014, a total of 14 seats were won but three councillors left the AAA which later became Solidarity.

The European elections saw Solidarity candidate, Rita Harrold, gain 4.967 first preference votes in Dublin or 1.4%. The PBP candidate received 10.864 votes.

These results, overall, are a blow for the Left in Ireland and a setback. Hard-working, campaigning Solidarity councillors lost their seats. The previous electoral gains were iustifiably celebrated not just in Ireland but internationally and seen as something to emulate by many on the Left.

For many activists who campaigned tirelessly in the local and European election, as well as for working-class supporters, the results are disappointing. They will want to draw out all the political conclusions.

For Marxists, the electoral field is often difficult terrain, offering a 'snapshot' of working-class consciousness. In the struggle to fundamentally change society, methods of mass class struggle, such as strikes and general strikes, are key in raising class consciousness and posing the question of taking power and overthrowing this rotter capitalist system.

A fundamental task of Marxists is to build a solid base among the working class and most oppressed, in the workplaces, colleges and communities and elsewhere where class struggle takes place.

For all the hurdles of standing in elections dominated by big business parties and money, and a pro-business mass media, they can be very useful in allowing socialists to reach a wider audience with their policies and ideas.

Where seats are won, they can be successfully used as platforms for promoting socialist ideas and championing workers' struggles, as the three Solidarity TD (members of Irish Parliament) have sought to do. However, when seats are lost or disappointingly low votes recorded. it is necessary for Marxists to openly explain why this has taken place. In the recent local and EU elections there was not the same

EU elections

with limited resources.

The election campaign meant that workers in precarious jobs. It was decided that the main slotranslate into votes for Rita.

Party

elections

in Ireland.

and most oppressed, in the colleges and communities and elsewhere where class struggle takes place is to build a solid base among the working class workplaces. International 🏟

Socialist

What we stand for our day-to-day campaigning for every possible improvement for working class people. The organised working class has the potential power to stop the cuts

As capitalism dominates the globe, the struggle for genuine socialism must

The Socialist Party fights for socialism – a democratic society run for the needs of all and not the profits of a few. We also oppose every cut, fighting in level of class anger and working class turnout that featured in those previous elections. Nevertheless, there are burning class issues, such as over the housing crisis and homelessness, the health sector crisis, and low-paid precarious jobs.

ties, workplace and union struggles photo Paul Murphy

The Solidarity local and EU election campaigns cited these important issues, and Rita Harrold and her team carried out an energetic campaign

Solidarity was able to raise its profile in Dublin, including linking up with paramedics involved in a dispute for union recognition and with young gan of Rita Harrold's campaign was for 'A Socialist Feminist for Europe'. An appeal was made to "to build the socialist feminist movement". The campaign hoped that the political radicalisation that took place among sections of society - youth, LGBTQ+ campaigners and community, and women, in particular - around the 2018 referendum to repeal antiwomen abortion legislation, would

No doubt, Solidarity did gain votes from these quarters but clearly it was not a substantial vote or a breakthrough among these layers in society. In all likelihood, many of the middle class sections radicalised by the Repeal referendum voted, in the main, for the petty bourgeois Green

Many working-class people who enthusiastically backed the Repeal referendum, last year, probably staved at home for the EU and local

The result of the referendum still reverberates in Irish society and there remain outstanding questions of gender and sexual oppression and the role of the Church and State

At the same time, other class issues have come or returned to the fore, such as regarding living wages. secure jobs and homes for all. Given this, sections of the working class may have thought the main slogans of the Solidarity EU election campaign were not directed at them. Clearly, the 'A Socialist Feminist for Europe' slogan was not sufficient to reach wider layers.

Also, the radicalisation of feminist activists in the struggle for equality for women, abortion rights, and those struggling for LGBTQ+ rights does not automatically mean greater radicalisation in a socialist direction

Such broad movements inevitably contain class divisions and ideological confusion. The surge in support of the Greens reflects the limitations of the radicalisation which took place.

A bold pro-working class, fighting socialist programme is required to offer an alternative.

Workplace struggles

The Left in southern Ireland has suffered a blow but now has to redouble its efforts in connecting with working-class communities, workplace and union struggles, and with youth and students, as well as campaigning against all forms of discrimination and oppression. New government attacks against the working class are on the order of the day.

Importantly, industrial resistance is increasing, with strikes recently involving nurses, midwives and paramedics (though poor deals were struck by the nurses' union leaders)

The three Solidarity TDs and remaining councillors can play a key role in leading the resistance, putting forward bold, socialist policies that promote the unity of the working class along with the oppressed. A clear socialist programme is needed to cut across the far right poison and to offer workers and youth a way to resist the parties of big business, to tackle climate change, homelessness and poverty pay, and to fight for a socialist society.

Article can be read in full on socialistworld.net

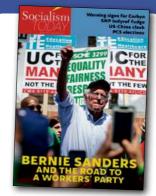

CWIT

The Committee for a Workers International (CWI) is the socialist international organisation to which the Socialist Party is affiliated. 2 CWI is organised in 45 countries and works to unite the working class and oppressed oples against global capitalism and to fight for a socialist world.

Socialism Today

The Socialist Party's magazine

lune issue incl

Bernie Sanders - the road to a new workers' party

US/China - what's behind the latest trade clash?

E3 including postage: Socialism Today, PO Box 24697, London E11 1YD. Subscribe for £25 a year at ocialismtodav.org be international. The Socialist Party is part of the Committee for a Workers' International (CWI), a socialist international that organises in over 40 and transform society.

Our demands include

PUBLIC SERVICES

No to ALL cuts in jobs, public services and benefits. Defend our

No to privatisation and the Private Finance Initiative (PFI). Renationalise all privatised utilities and services. with compensation paid only on the basis of proven need.

Fully fund all services and run them under accountable, democratic committees that include representatives of service workers and users.

Free, publicly run, good quality education, available to all at any age. Abolish university tuition fees now and introduce a living grant. No to academies and 'free schools'! A socialist NHS to provide for everyone's health needs - free at the point of use and under democratic control. Kick out private contractors! Keep council housing publicly owned. For a massive building programme of publicly owned housing, on an environmentally sustainable basis, to provide good quality homes with low rents.

WORK AND INCOME

Trade union struggle to increase the minimum wage to £10 an hour without exemptions as an immediate step towards a real living wage. For an annual increase in the minimum wage linked to average earnings. Scrap zero-hour contracts.

All workers, including part-timers, temps, casual and migrant workers to have trade union rates of pay. employment protection, and sickness and holiday rights from day one of employment

An immediate 50% increase in the state retirement pension, as a step towards a living pension.

Scrap Universal Credit. For the right to decent benefits, education, training, or a job, without compulsion Scrap the anti-trade union laws! For fighting trade unions, democratically controlled by their members. Full-time union officials to be regularly elected and receive no more than a worker's wage. Support the National Shop Stewards Network A maximum 35-hour week with no loss of nav

ENVIRONMENT

Major research and investment into replacing fossil fuels with renewable energy and into ending the problems of early obsolescence and un-recycled waste.

Public ownership of the energy generating industries. No to nuclea power. No to Trident

A democratically planned, low-fare, publicly owned transport system as part of an overall plan against environmental pollution

Oppose discrimination on the grounds of race, gender, disability, sexuality, age, and all other forms of prejudice.

Repeal all laws that trample over civil liberties. For the right to protest End police harassment Defend abortion rights. For a woman's right to choose when and whether to have children. For the right to asylum. No to racist immigration laws.

For the right to vote at 16

MASS WORKERS' PARTY

For a mass workers' party drawing together workers, young people and activists from workplace, community environmental and anti-racist and anti-cuts campaigns, to provide a fighting, political alternative to the pro-big business parties.

Fight for Labour to be transformed into such a party: deselect the Blairites.

SOCIALISM AND INTERNATIONALISM No to imperialist wars and occupations.

Tax the super-rich! For a socialist government to take into public ownership the top 150 companies and the banking system that dominate the British economy, and run them under democratic working class control and management Compensation to be paid only on the basis of proven need

A democratic socialist plan of production based on the interests of the overwhelming majority of people, and in a way that safeguards the environment

No to the bosses' neoliberal European Union and single market. For a socialist Europe and a socialist world

Join the fightback! Join the Socialists!

socialistparty.org.uk/join 020 8988 8777 ist_party 🐧 text 07761 818 206 🛛 🖉 / CWISocialistPart

the Socialist The Socialist Construction Con

Tom Baldwin Bristol Socialist Party

very week seems to bring a new story of factory closure; another chapter in the destruction of Brit ish manufacturing.

Workers are being made to pay the price of economic uncertainty, including around Brexit, as bosses seek bigger profits elsewhere.

Ford's plans to close their engine plant in Bridgend (see page 2) adds to a long list of threatened sites. Nissan in Sunderland, Honda in Swindon and British Steel in Scunthorpe have all announced closure plans this year.

Each of these threatens tens of thousands of relatively well-paid jobs and devastation to the local communities.

Retail workers are being hit too as the crisis in the high street continues. The number of empty shops rose by 7,500 last year. Big chains including M&S, Debenhams and Boots have announced store closures with thousands more job losses.

Workers will fight to defend their jobs. Thousands joined Unite the Union's march through Swindon in defence of Honda workers. The fightback against the jobs massacre must be built and coordinated. This includes preparing for industrial action wherever necessary.

Building the fightback will be one of the key discussions of the National Shop Stewards Network (NSSN) conference on 6 July this year. The NSSN is a rank-and-file trade union body, founded in 2006 by Bob Crow, the late leader of the transport workers' union RMT.

Speakers

Speakers at the conference include Paddy Brennan, Unite convener of the Honda Swindon plant. You can book your place today.

The decimation of jobs must be stopped. The Socialist Party calls for the nationalisation of threatened plants and shops to save jobs. Workers' livelihoods will only be safe from the designs of greedy bosses if we take the decisions out of their hands.

Taking the biggest businesses into public ownership under democratic workers' control would allow the economy to be planned to serve the needs of the many, not the profits of a few.

NSSN 2019 conference

Saturday 6 July, 11am - 4.30pm

Conway Hall, 25 Red Lion Square, London WC1R 4RL

shopstewards.net