2017 was the year that we nearly got rid of the Tories. The General Election result has shocked the Tories and the media but it has confirmed that we've had enough of brutal cuts. Jeremy Corbyn's manifesto gave workers the opportunity to express their anger. Now with confidence lifted, many will feel that this weak Tory Government, propped up by the DUP, can be defeated.

2018 has seen the continuation of last year's strike wave, from railworkers fighting the removal of the guard to low-paid health workers and McDonald's staff striking against low pay and the Birmingham binworkers defending their contracts. Now, university lecturers have taken action to defend their pensions and mobilising in their thousands to reject the employers' deal. But how much could be achieved if workers fight and strike together? We have a proud record of fighting for co-ordinated action against the Tories and the bosses.

Come to the 2018 National Shop Stewards Network Annual Conference on Saturday July 7th in London. It is open to all trade union and anti-cuts campaigners. We have re-arranged the date to avoid a clash with a national day of action to celebrate the 70th anniversary of the NHS on June 30th. We will do all we can to build the protests against continuing Tory health cuts.
